

James Metzen Mighty Ducks Ice Arena Grant Program (1995-2000; 2014-2016)

Between 1995 and 2000, the Minnesota Amateur Sports Commission managed an innovative program that provided grants of up to $250,000 for communities seeking to construct new sheets of ice or $50,000 for renovation projects on existing facilities. These grants were all matched by local private or non-state public funds.

The program was initiated because of a serious shortage of ice time around the state. Significant growth was taking place in all ice sports, but especially in girls' ice hockey. This growth spurt for a new female sport began in earnest in the mid-1990's and continued unabated through the duration of the Mighty Ducks Grant Program. There was already a shortage of ice time even without a growing group of female hockey players, but their arrival on the Minnesota sports landscape made the issue even more pressing.

Instead of battling head-to-head with male hockey teams, the MASC pioneered an innovative solution to resolve the shortage: help construct additional ice facilities. Thus, the Mighty Ducks Grant Program was born.

"The Mighty Ducks legislation provided the answer to the problem," said State Representative Bob Milbert, who was also a member of the MASC Board. "Equitable ice times became available for girls and women, without penalizing boys' teams."

Since the original round of grants in December 1995 through the completion of the program in 2000, a total of $18,405,000 in grants were awarded toward the construction or renovation of Minnesota ice arenas, resulting in the construction of 61 new sheets of ice across the state.

Did the Mighty Ducks program accomplish its mission? If you look at the numbers of Minnesota female hockey players, the answer is yes. USA Hockey registration numbers for 2011-2012 show 12,697 female players in Minnesota. That figure is 3,000 more than the next closest state, Massachusetts, and more than double any other state behind Massachusetts. In fact, one in five female hockey players in the U.S. live and play in Minnesota.

While quantity does not always equate to quality, in the case of women's hockey in Minnesota, it has. 11 of the 22 players on the 2017 U.S. Women's U18 National Team that defeated Canada to win the World Championship, were from Minnesota. 12 of the 52 players invited to try out for the 2017 over-19 U.S. Women's National Team call Minnesota home. Check the roster of the seven-time national champion University of Minnesota Women's Hockey Team and you'll find 18 of 25 players from Minnesota .

Minnesota women's hockey has grown and matured to the point that we have legends, players who've made their mark as the best in the world, and are recognizable even to non-hockey fans – Natalie Darwitz, Jenny Potter, Krissy Wendell, Gigi Marvin, and others.

In 2014, the grant program was revived by the State Legislature to help Minnesota communities deal with two new issues facing ice arenas: the mandated phase-out of R-22 refrigerant and improving air quality. The program still requires local matching funds and grants are also available for building new sheets of ice.

James Metzen Mighty Ducks Grant Program in summary:

- Total state investment: over $20 million
- 82 grants awarded for new arenas, producing 64 new sheets of ice
- 97 grants awarded to improve existing arenas
- Non-state spending leveraged: $163 million
- Sports benefited by Mighty Ducks grants: hockey, speed skating, figure skating, in-line hockey, broomball, bandy, disabled and senior ice sports.
